WELCOME

Dear fellow Hoosiers,

It's no coincidence that outdoor recreation is a passion for so many in our state. We are blessed with the natural resources, professional management know-how and dedication that combine to give us the opportunity to unwind in a variety of terrain and waters.

In the Pence family, our favorite family activities are horseback riding, bicycling and, more recently, mountain biking. I recall countless memories with our kids, now grown and in college, out on the horse trail or taking bike rides while enjoying the fresh air and the Indiana great outdoors. Last year, inspired by the praise some of the mountain bike trails at our state parks have received, I joined Hoosier mountain bikers for a knobby-tire ride at Fort Harrison State Park.

In this guide, you'll find that opportunities for these and other outdoor activities abound at Indiana's state parks.

Hike or bike some of the 600-plus miles of trails. Visit an interpretive nature center for a fun, hands-on educational program that children and adults alike can enjoy. Pitch a tent by the campfire with family and friends. State Parks have more than 7,500 campsites to choose from. Our seven Indiana State Park Inns also offer excellent indoor alternatives within a beautiful outdoor setting.

Whether you ride horses or bicycles or prefer other outdoor pursuits, opportunity awaits in the Hoosier State. These pages tell you what you can do and where you can do it. Your biggest challenge may be figuring out where to go first...and next.

Michael R. Pence
Governor of Indiana

A State that Works

Dear fellow Hoosiers,

We have been busy this past year improving many of your favorite places and making some that you may have not visited even more tempting. The improvements have ranged from small touch-ups to rather large projects.

You'll find a handful of our new features at Falls of the Ohio, Ouabache, Charlestown and Tippecanoe River state parks, as well as at Hardy Lake. Some are ready now. Others are in the home stretch.

Back in the Depression era, improvement to state parks often came in the form of federal government work programs. The most well known was the Civilian Conservation Corps. Ouabache was one of the parks the CCC had a hand in building. This year, visitors to Ouabache will see an Iron Mike statue to honor the work done by CCC members. It's one of only two in the state.

Tippecanoe River State Park has added two new river overlooks from which to view one of Indiana's most scenic and ecologically important waterways.

Later this year at Charlestown, new outdoor exhibits interpreting the remains of the historic amusement park called Rose Island on what's now park property will debut.

At Hardy Lake, the growing number of young people interested in archery will be among those who will want to check out the new range.

The most extensive improvement, a $5.5 million exhibit redesign and installation at Falls of the Ohio, is scheduled for completion this fall. A major portion of that new exhibit will inform guests about some of the oldest DNR attractions, the fossils of one of the country's great rivers.

Whether they are new, old or middle-aged, the attractions and activities in this handy guide will keep you active all year long.

Division of Nature Preserves

Indiana's system of nature preserves protects unique or outstanding natural areas throughout the state. These are living museums that contain examples of relatively undisturbed natural communities similar to those seen by the first explorers to the region. Many also serve as habitat for species of plants and animals that are rare in Indiana.

In addition to the nature preserves listed on the map, a number of areas within other DNR properties are designated as nature preserves. There are also nature preserves owned by local governments, universities and private conservation organizations.

Maps of nature preserves that have trails and are generally open for general visitation, including those listed on page 3, can be downloaded from the website listed below. The only activities universally allowed at nature preserves are hiking and photography. See map on page 3.
